Executive Toolbox

2020 Course

Executive Toolbox is a programme for Christian workplace leaders, which is uniquely structured to help you have a significant impact on the way you work, the people you work with and the organisations you work in.

Join a cohort of just 36 people for a 6-month programme based around three 24-hour workshops led by an experienced training team. Designed for Christians in mid to senior levels of influence, Executive Toolbox combines teaching with case studies, worship, prayer, and accountability triplets. You will develop biblical foundations, skills, and spiritual practices to envision and equip you to engage fruitfully at work.

Dates for 2020

Module 1: 31 Jan/1 Feb

Module 2: 3/4 April

Module 3: 26/27 June

Who Will Benefit?

This is a course designed for women and men working mainly with non-Christians, in organisations where their roles and responsibilities offer them growing influence.

A typical cohort includes business owners and leaders, managers and directors, head teachers, heads of department in public service and, many others. And this doesn't exclude younger executives. What's important is that you want to learn, grow in impact, share and receive wisdom, and be more accountable for your calling to the workplace. You'll be aware of the 'sacred-secular divide' and its corrosive impact, convinced the workplace matters to God and that you're called there as a disciple. You're on the alert to make a difference and indeed you already are. But you want more: biblical depth; exposure to a broader range of praxis; fellow travellers who share some of the same challenges and opportunities; and input from a range of experts.

The Programme

The Programme is designed as three core modules.

We've shaped the programme to make it accessible to people in busy roles at work and home, so each 24-hour module will run from 6pm on the evening of day one to 6pm on day two. Overall, the teaching style will be interactive so you can look forward to learning as much from one another as from the training team. In each 24-hour module there will be a varied menu of direct teaching, real life case studies, group work, personal input, and time for reflection. Prior to the first module there will be a small amount of preparatory work and reflection. Between modules there will be approximately 10 hours of reading and exercises related to your own work. You would be expected to commit to all three modules.

The Training Team

The team includes experienced executives, leading workplace practitioners, and engaging theological observers.

Charles Hipsley: Director of LICC's Work Forum

Charles joined LICC as Director - LICC Work Forum in January 2012, and is the course leader of Executive Toolbox. He is the co-author of Transforming Work: an innovative resource for Christians in the workplace. Previously, he worked in financial services as Chief Operating Officer of a private equity investment company, and was Executive Director of a listed technology products and services business.

Jill Garrett: Senior Executive Coach & Leadership Consultant

Jill is Executive Director of Leadership Development and Employee Engagement at Tentpeg Consulting. Previously Jill was European Managing Director of the Gallup Organisation, Director of Leadership Development, and a Secondary School Head teacher. Over the years she has worked closely with a number of Christian leadership teams, CEO's and Boards and invests a good deal of time mentoring and coaching Christian leaders.

Mark Greene: Executive Director of LICC

Mark is LICC's Executive Director and has been in post since 1999. Before that he served as Vice-Principal and Lecturer in Communications at the London School of Theology. Prior to his work at LST, he spent ten years working in advertising in London and New York. Mark has been a pioneer in workplace ministry for two decades and has spoken widely on the topic in the UK, continental Europe, Asia and in the US. Mark has produced a number of workplace resources, notably Thank God it's Monday and Fruitfulness on the Frontline.

Beverley Shepherd: Management Trainer, Coach & Author

Within LICC Bev has responsibility for the workplace Prayer Journeys – an initiative designed to motivate, encourage, and equip Christians to pray in and for their workplaces. She is also part of the teaching team on LICC's Executive Toolbox. Bev is a management trainer and developmental coach, specialising in the areas of team effectiveness, conflict resolution, and stress resilience. She is author of Insight into Stress. Also in the mix: she is a conference speaker and writer, loves ballroom dancing, and (when the sun is shining) enjoys an early morning paddle on the Thames in her kayak.
